Please hold your horses.. Everything is fine and dandy.. He is just kinda floundering around searching for an exit. It is a problem people can actually solve, no software, just some basic tools.. Keep trying.. But that is the best that will happen and even then, not guaranteed if the person is not already in a hurry and on the go.. This is not a bad thing.. If you are the owner of the copyright of the content that you have shared, you may send a DMCA notice to YouTube DMCA. At the same time, if you are the owner of the material, you can also send a DMCA notice. A DMCA notice is an official correspondence between you and YouTube, where you claim that the copyright violation has occurred and you ask YouTube to take the necessary actions. When sending a DMCA notice, it is necessary to keep all the required information and documentation about the material that is being claimed to be violating the copyright, as well as provide digital copies, if possible. DMCA notice is not only sending the material, but includes the documentation that can show the real owner and the copyright holder of the material. The material that was shared does not violate copyright when it is uploaded in the public domain and public property (such as news, images, film, and music).

These are also protected by copyright. If you upload a material that you do not have the rights to, you will not be able to protect it in the public domain. If you are the owner of the content that you have shared, you may send a DMCA notice to Google. In the same way, if you are the owner of the material, you can send a DMCA notice as well.
