Adobe Photoshop Crack + Download

Various products such as wine bottles, cosmetics containers, beverage cans and the like are generally known. In recent years, such containers (hereinafter referred to simply as “bottles”) have been made thinner to lighten the weight of the containers, to reduce the size of the container, to increase their transparency, and to make it easier to handle the containers. Such containers, however, are difficult to grip and hold as the walls of the containers (particularly the lower corners) are thin. Moreover, in the case of a thinned, transparent container, the surface of the container cannot be seen through the container, so that it is difficult to determine when and where the bottle has been touched by, for example, the user's hand, and that can give an unpleasant feeling when, for example, drinking a beverage in the bottle. In addition, these containers are also difficult to recycle after use, and when they are recycled, the shapes and configurations of the containers may be destroyed. In an effort to prevent these problems, in recent years, the use of a bottle in which the bottle walls are reinforced by providing the bottle with a looped strip has been proposed. For example, in Japanese Patent Application Publication No. 2004-290238, the lower corners of a bottle are reinforced by providing a looped strip which is looped at the lower corners of the bottle, and which has a diameter larger than the diameter of the opening of the bottle. Moreover, in Japanese Patent Application Publication No. H11-81380, a looped strip and a reinforcing strip of the same shape as the looped strip are provided at the lower corners of the bottle, the reinforcing strip overlapping the looped strip. In the case of the looped strips described in the above-mentioned Patent Applications, the bottom of the bottle is provided with a reinforcing body, and this reinforcing body fits into a locking groove provided in the looped strip. Furthermore, in Japanese Patent Application Publication No. H11-255775, a handle-shaped looped strip is provided at the lower corners of a bottle, the bottom of the bottle is provided with a reinforcing body, and the reinforcing body fits into a locking groove provided in the looped strip. Furthermore, in Japanese Patent Application Publication No. 2003-51093, a looped strip is provided at the lower corners of a bottle, the bottom of the bottle is provided with a reinforcing body, and the reinforcing body fits into a locking groove provided in the looped strip.
