Short tandem repeat typing of Corynebacterium spp. clinical isolates in Poland. Corynebacterium spp. is an important genus of facultative pathogenic bacteria that includes species associated with a variety of clinical infections. In this study, polymorphic loci for the identification and typing of Corynebacterium spp. clinical isolates obtained from blood and other body fluids were applied. Thirty-eight isolates were found to contain three to eight polymorphic loci. The population structure of Corynebacterium spp. has been revealed by clustering analysis and comparison of overall genetic distances. The population structure was investigated using a model-based clustering method, the STRUCTURE software, and a linkage disequilibrium analysis. We determined that three and four clusters of Corynebacterium spp. are present in blood and body fluids, respectively. These findings can be of value for epidemiological investigations and taxonomic purposes. {

Available in National Library (Singapore).Q: D3.js word frequency d3.js When I console.log the output the node.d.values is 2. When I console.log the nodes the output is very strange. The first node is item: ["e", "2", "e", "3", "e", "4", "e", "5", "e", "6", "e", "7", "e", "8", "e", "9"] The second node is word: ["e", "2", "e", "3", "e", "4", "e", "5", "e", "6", "e", "7", "e", "8", "e", "9"] I only want the word frequency. How to make the first node is just {name:2}. How to make the second node is just {name:"e"}? A: The problem is that the property you try to access is not a property of the object, but a property of the array returned by each. I suggest making a small change to the code and modifying the pie chart: // The element to add the tooltip to var svg = d3.select("body").append("svg:svg").attr("width", width + margin.right + margin.left) .attr("height", height + margin.top + margin.bottom) .append("svg:g") d0c515b9f4
