“FIFA is the most widely-played sport in the world, with over 300 million players regularly taking to the pitch in a wide range of leagues,” said Michael Tarnat, senior producer at EA SPORTS. “We’re always looking for ways to improve the experience of playing FIFA, and we’re so excited to be able to leverage movement data from the best football players in the world to make FIFA more authentic and immersive.” Added Dirk Campanile, creative director at EA SPORTS: “This is a step forward for FIFA that I hope will resonate with real fans of the sport. We’ve taken the data from a real-life high-intensity match and used that as a foundation for creating the most authentic and authentic-feeling gameplay on our systems.” One of the most beloved player faces in the entire video game industry, Paul Scholes, joins EA SPORTS as a global brand ambassador for FIFA. As part of this new partnership, Scholes will appear in a series of broadcast, digital, and social content and campaigns. Scholes has been a global ambassador for FIFA since the launch of the series in 1994. On top of his brand partnership, Scholes will serve as an on-camera pundit on the EA SPORTS Football TV channel, host and score analyst for EA SPORTS FIFA Ultimate Team, serve as a guest referee, and provide commentary on EA SPORTS FIFA and the FIFA franchise as a whole. Fans can check out Scholes in action as a brand ambassador and commentator in their upcoming FIFA 22 global reveal.
